Hi, I'm Murilo, a full-stack developer who specializes in Ruby, Rails, Javascript, React, and Redux. I recently graduated from Microverse, a remote full-stack development program with a focus on git-standup and peer to peer programming. Just in the past year, I've built 55 projects, registered 1445 hours, and completed 86 coding challenges. Out of those projects, my favorite is a Rails mobile app that tracks a user's dietary health by measuring the number of calories that were consumed daily. Before Microverse, I was a chemical engineer working as an Operations Manager in Oil Filtration, which is where I found my love for process automation and programming--using Visual Basic I increased machine efficiency by 20%. Currently, I'm exploring full-stack development opportunities, particularly with small businesses and startups. Are there any positions you know about? If so, can we set a time to discuss them further? Here's my business card which links to my resume and portfolio, please feel free to pass it along.
